PADDINGTON

This wrap-around lap pool in Paddington was designed to be the centre of attention in this newly renovated terrace.

Based in Thornleigh, Crystal Pools has cultivated a stellar reputation for building quality in-ground concrete swimming pools.

In its early days, the company introduced sprayed-concrete pool construction to Australia. Since its inception in 1957, the company has built more than 20,000 residential pools and expanded into the commercial sector, with more than 1000 commercial pools to its name.

The sales and marketing manager at Crystal Pools, Andrew Rothery, says the company's unparalleled expertise is what sets it apart from the rest. "Having a commercial pools division provides a much greater range of expertise than other companies," he says. "From plunge pools to Olympic pools... any style or design you can imagine, chances are we've built it!"

Most members of the Crystal Pools staff possess extensive experience in the construction industry. "We have staff members that have been with Crystal Pools for up to 20 years and some of our subcontractors have been here for more than 40 years," says Rothery.

With 220 major awards to its name, the company has been continually recognised at the MBA awards, Hills Building & Design awards and SPASA awards at a state, national and international level.

Crystal Pools has observed a trend among homeowners towards environmentally friendly features and automation. "The [rising] interest in smart technologies - [which] allow you to completely control pool-management remotely - has increased tenfold in the past five years," says Rothery.

The company anticipates a bright future for the industry and will continue to build pools of superior quality throughout the greater Sydney Basin in the years to come. "[Increasingly], people are building pools in their backyards to keep the children entertained," observes Rothery.
